

The Calgary Highlanders Regimental Watch To Honour Our History

In April 1910 the people of Calgary proudly formed the 103rd Regiment (Calgary Rifles). At the outset of the Great War, the 103rd contributed the most soldiers to what became the 10th Battalion, Canadian Expeditionary Force. Calgary's fighting men were among the first Allied troops to encounter chlorine gas at Ypres near an oak plantation at St. Julien known as Kitchener's Wood. When French troops broke and ran in the face of poison gas, the 10th Battalion were ordered to counter attack at night directly into withering enemy machine gun fire. The Allied Commander-In-Chief General Foch referred to this action as the "single most gallant act of the war" earning soldiers of the Regiment the rare distinction of wearing a single metal oak leaf on each shoulder. The 10th went on to play a significant role in Canada's glorious victory at Vimy Ridge. In August 1917, the battle for Hill 70 would gain it the distinction of winning more medals than any other Canadian combat unit in a single action, earning over two days, a Victoria Cross, three Distinguished Service Orders, seven Military Crosses, nine Distinguished Conduct Medals, and sixty Military Medals. After the Great War, one of the Calgary components of the Regiment was renamed the Highlanders.

In the Second World War, The Calgary Highlanders would proudly fight in North West Europe distinguishing themselves once more with singular valour as they won 22 battle honors. Bourguebus Ridge, Faubourg de Vaucelles, Clair Tison in the Falaise Action, the names echo proudly through the ages. The ensuing battles for the Breskens Pocket would forever mark the Regiment's place in the Canadian history. Woensdrecht, South Beveland and the grueling fight for Walcheren when, on Hallowe'en night 1944, the regiment successfully completed a frontal assault on the mile long causeway. From there, the Highlanders advanced into the heart of the Nazi empire—the Rhineland, Doetinchem. Gruppenbuhren and Olldenburg - as the Regiment successfully fought on German soil in the very last battles of the war.

In the peace which has followed, the Regiment has continued to serve Canada globally and at home. Highlanders have been in missions with NATO and the United Nations throughout the world—Cyprus, the Golan Heights, the former Yugoslavia, Cambodia, Somalia, Sudan, the Middle East and the war in Afghanistan to which it has contributed mightily.

The Calgary Highlanders Regimental Association is extremely pleased to partner with a leading Canadian watch designer Time is Ticking Inc., a company with a long and honourable history of creating watches for the Canadian Armed Forces.
